
Chapter 2 — Sankhya Yoga

The Art of Surviving Without Screaming

Modern Vishāda Yoga: Arjuna in 2025

🧨 1. Spiritual Wallpaper, Emotional Malware

“You post Gita verses in gold font, but explode when your chai is late.” Krishna’s in your bio, but not in your bandwidth.

🧨 2. House of Rituals, Heart of Reactions

“Your mom chants Hanuman Chalisa 108 times, but whispers gossip 109 times during the same breath.”

🧨 3. Hyper-connected, Deeply Detached

“Everyone’s in the same room, sharing the same Wi-Fi— but talking only through reels, emojis, and resentments.”

🧨 4. God is in the DP, But So Is Passive-Aggression

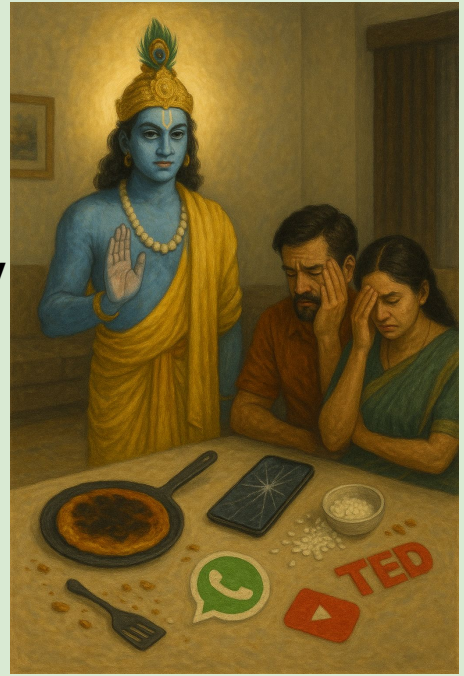
“You set Krishna as your WhatsApp photo. But rage when your child won’t fold their hands at the temple.”

🧨 5. Manju the Goddess, Manky the Firmware

“Manju runs the house, career, prayers, and panchangam. Manky is still updating his opinion on feminism.”

🧨 6. Zoom Fights & Filtered Faith

“You argued with your spouse during online satsang, then posted ‘Om Shanti 🙏’ to your story.”



Krishna’s Begins…Gita 2.11: Crying Loud, Quoting Louder

अशोच्यानन्वशोचस्त्वं प्रज्ञावादांश्च भाषसे।
गतासूनगतासूंश्च नानुशोचन्ति पण्डिताः॥

Translation:
“You grieve for those not worthy of grief, yet speak words of wisdom. The wise mourn neither the living nor the dead.”

Manky–Manju Remix:

“You cry when your child doesn’t reply for 3 days,
“You cry because they unfriended on Facebook or Instagram.
“Krishna is your profile pic. Gita quotes are your Whatsapp status.
But the moment someone disagrees with your beliefs, you go full Kurukshetra on their comment section.
Your spirituality ends when your maid forgets to wipe the microwave.
You sound like a yogi in your forwarded quotes,
but you panic like a toddler when your child says:
‘I don’t need parents. I need space and your credit card.’

Krishna’s in your DP. But not in your DNA.”
And your ego still owns the house.

“Gita says the wise don’t grieve.

You?

You cry like Sivaji Ganesan in Paasamalar”

Gita 2.12: You Existed Before WhatsApp

न त्वेवाहं जातु नासं न त्वं नेमे जनाधिपाः।
न चैव न भविष्यामः सर्वे वयमतः परम्॥

Translation:
"There was never a time I was not, nor you, nor these kings. Nor shall any of us cease to be."

Manky–Manju Remix:

"You think your Gen-Z kid invented rebellion? Please. Your MIL was the original firebrand who ghosted traditions before it was cool.

You weren't born the day your photo got 120 likes. And you won't vanish when your son calls you 'cringe.'

You're eternal, not ephemeral. Stop behaving like a Chrome plugin."

Modern Vishāda Snapshot:

- Role confusion: "Am I a parent, therapist, or obsolete service provider?"
- Family dynamics turned transactional: "What do you do for me?"
- Generation gap between enlightenment and entitlement'

But Krishna reminds you: You're not new here.

- You've done this before — in another app, another family, another form."

Roles are like clothes — the soul just keeps changing wardrobes."

Gita 2.13: Parenting is a Temporary Login

देहिनोऽस्मिन्यथा देहे कौमारं यौवनं जरा। तथा देहान्तरप्राप्तिर्धीरस्तत्र न मुह्यति॥

Translation:
“As the soul passes through childhood, youth, and old age, so also it passes into another body. The wise are not deluded by this.”

Manky–Manju Remix:

“Your child uninstalls you when asked them to wash clothes or do chores, and reinstalls you during scholarship deadlines and gadget upgrades.

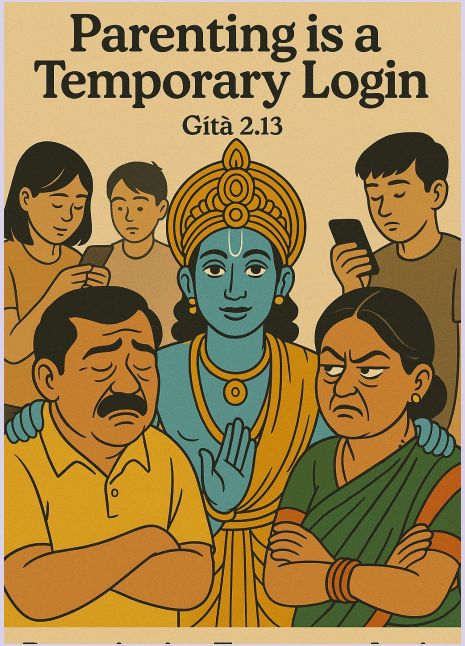
Manju ties manja kodi, lights the lamp, draws kolam at 6 a.m.,and logs into a high-stakes client meeting by 8 — smiling like nothing cracked in between.

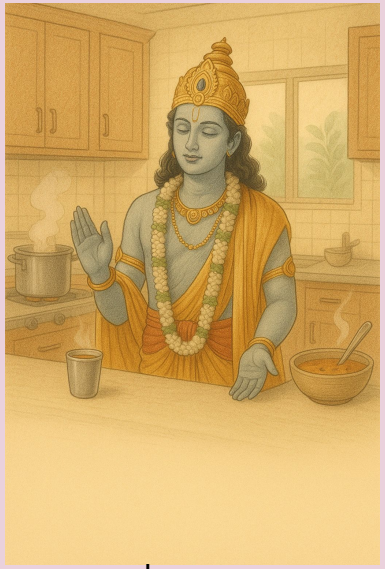
Manky, meanwhile, is still glued to the sofa, passionately debating Trump tariffs with strangers on Social media while ignoring real-life fiscal cliffs at home.

Your title — mother, father, manager, martyr — is just today’s costume.

The soul’s been through enough wardrobes to know not to get attached to the hanger.”



Gita 2.14: Today, Your Rasam 5 *s, Tomorrow - *



मात्रास्पर्शास्तु कौन्तेय शीतोष्णसुखदुखदाः।
आगमापायिनोऽनित्यास्तांस्तितिक्षस्व भारत॥

Translation:
“Sensory experiences—hot/cold, pleasure/pain - come and go. Endure them patiently, O Bharata.”

Manky–Manju Version:

“Today your child hugs you. Tomorrow they say, 'Can you not breathe so loud?'

One day your rasam is heaven. Next day your Swiggy-loving son rates plastic-paneer as ‘divine.’

Calm down. You're not the sambar. You're the stove.”

Modern Vishāda Snapshot:

- Emotional instability from news cycles
- Likes = dopamine. Silence = depression
- COVID lockdown = too much family, not enough solitude

Verse 2.15 — Krishna’s Resilience Rating

यं हि न व्यथयन्त्येते पुरुषं पुरुषर्षभ।
समदुःखसुखं धीरं सोऽमृतत्वाय कल्पते॥

Translation:
“He whom pleasure and pain do not disturb,
who remains steady — he is fit for immortality.”

Manky–Manju version:

“The one who tolerates bad WiFi, cold coffee, and family judgment— without sulking, snapping, or spiraling— that one isn’t burnt out. That one’s enlightened.”

Modern Vishāda:

- “They mocked my outfit.”
- “My child didn’t wish me Happy Birthday.”
- “My spouse praised neighbor instead of me.”
- FOMO & overthinking = daily instability

Summary – From Vishāda to Viveka

Chapter 1 was meltdown.
Chapter 2 is mind-stirring.
Dharma begins when you stop popping.

“Spirituality in the house is like expired turmeric — everyone claims it’s there, no one uses it properly.”

“Your ancestors did yajnas. You do YouTube comments.”

“You fast on Ekadashi. Your child fasts for battery life.”

“You’re expected to be Manju, the Devi with ten arms. But even Durga had a lion to help. You got a sofa-bound Manky.”